Reaffirm Pledge to President; Will Return to Work at Bridgeport

By International News Service.
Bridgeport, Ct., Sept. 16.—Reaffirming their loyalty to the government, the striking munition workers here today sent a lengthy reply to President Wilson's order that they return to work, promising to do so at once and do their part in keeping up the flow of munitions.

They also promised that they would take up their grievances in an orderly manner with the War-Water War Labor Board, and asked his influence to get them an early hearing.

"To the great cause of keeping up the flow of munitions in which you have dedicated yourself and the present administration the munitionists are, we hope, equally dedicated," the message reads.

"We fully accept your command that we return to the working conditions which are left and we shall proceed, as you advise us, to reestablish our case to the established government tribunals, leaving the event in your hands as chief magistrate of our mighty nation."

OPPOSED BY ANTI-TRADE UNIONS.
The message then goes on to say that while they have no further right to discuss the past issue, they ask the authority of the President for the guidance of the President, some of the incidents of the struggle and of the hearings held before the award was made.

"We were opposed," the message continues, "by the clearest, most astute and most successful labor hating lawyers in the United States, with unlimited funds to fight us, the employers of New England brought in Walter Drew, famous from end to end of America as a union breaker, and they brought in Mr. Merrill and Mr. Wallace, lawyers who appeared in court with what seemed to be the most magnanimous and charitable proposals for labor ever advanced by employers."

ANSWER WAS THREAT.
"To obtain security in our work and to carry on production without the constant menace of shifting price rates, shifting day rates, shifting classifications to jockey men out of bookkeeping raises in pay, we asked the employers to grant the principle of a minimum wage for our organized workers with the government as guarantor."

"The employers failed in their purpose. The ordinance bureau heard the case and agreed with the justice and an award was handed to us that was substantially just. By the guaranteeing us the principle of the minimum wage, they practically struck against our own backs."

WANT TO PUT ON EMBROIDERY.
The strike is now over. The workers are back at work. The strike is now over. The workers are back at work.

The Final Dish

By MORTON BIRGE.
(Mrs. Blatte L. Hagar of Oklahoma says records show that General Pershing is descended from an aristocratic family named Fleischer, meaning "peach.")
Tracing back the Pershing name from its present hall of fame, records say that one will reach "Fleischer," meaning simply "peach." Some one ought to let them in on this secret in Berlin. On the information page, the Pershing name is mentioned as being the name of a peach. Sounds as though it must be true. But to us it's nothing new. In our Anglo-Saxon speech Pershing just the same as "Peach." Hinting Kaiser where it hurts. Giving him his just deserts. For the Hohenzollerns each Just deserts of "Pershing Peach."

2 FLETERS DEAD IN CRASH, ONE FROM BOSTON

New York, Sept. 16.—First Lieutenant E. H. Austin, who sailed from Boston, and Second Lieutenant Charles E. Kearny, Jr., from Covington, Ky., United States Army fliers, were crashed to death in the fall of their airplane today on the bank of the river at the residence of Henry D. Lott, No. 181 Ocean avenue, Brooklyn.

The tragedy was witnessed by hundreds of persons who, from the streets and windows of homes, had been watching the airplane maneuvering for more than an hour and had seen them twice make graceful sailings on the parade grounds south of Prospect Park.

Lieutenant Austin was attached to the first wing and Lieutenant Kearny to the second wing of the Mitchell field at Mineola, L. I.

They left the Mitchell hangars at 8:15 a. m. for the morning for flying practice and military observation and were in one of the big new types of observation machines.

They were first seen at an altitude of about 1,000 feet circling above the parade grounds and the airplane was responding faultlessly in banking, looping, and climbing.

At about 5 o'clock it landed on the parade grounds, and to a policeman who stepped out to greet them the fliers said there had been engine trouble, but it was slight and they would be able to get into the air again. They spent about fifteen minutes working over the engine and then ascended.

Again the big observation machine began a series of graceful evolutions and performed a work that brought it within about three hundred feet of the earth. Just then the humming of the airplane died down and the machine came to a stop. The fliers were seen to get out of the machine and the house in Ocean avenue and brought the machine successfully down to the ground, landed on the side, and the fliers, locked to their seats in the machine, were caught under the structure and their skulls fractured.

Ft. Kronprinz First to Feel American Fire Near Metz

When American artillery begins its concentrated bombardment of the forts defending Metz on the western side, the fortification named after the German Crown Prince probably will be the first taken under direct fire.

Fort Kronprinz lies in the outskirts of Metz, in the direction of the line of works southwest of Metz, in which direction the Americans are advancing. Most of the forts have names.

FRENCH STORM MONT SINGES, TAKE VAILLY

Make Rapid Strides in Flank Move Against Chemin des Dames; Take 300 Boches.
By International News Service.
Paris, Sept. 16.—The French made another great step in their flanking operation against the Chemin des Dames by capturing Vailly last night and taking by storm Mont Singes. Both captures were announced by the War Office today.

Three hundred German prisoners were taken at Mont Singes, which is in the sector of the plateau east of Vailly, where progress was made Sunday. Vailly is nine miles east of Soissons, on the north bank of the Aisne. The text of the communiqué follows:

"Continued progress has been made by the French east of Vailly. Mont Singes was taken, along with 300 prisoners. Further south the French have captured Vailly."

APPEAL FOR HELP WAR HEROES IS NEEDED

Steadily grows the Boston AMERICAN'S fund for wounded soldiers. As of Saturday it had reached $170.22. Contributions of $24.43 today added to the fund to $194.65.

As fast as the contributions come in they are being sent to Mrs. Anna E. Foster, wife of Major Foster, who is treasurer for the fund.

Major Foster is taking a keen and active interest in the fund. Here is a letter from the United States hospital at the front for some of the fund, and contains a good suggestion.

"I want to tell you the method we have taken to raise money for the wounded soldiers and sailors. I took a small cigar box, out of the box I took a coin to go through and passed on the side the holding of the box. The AMERICAN'S fund placed this box on the shelf in front of the office, so that anyone can see and read it."

GIVE SOME SMALL CHANGE.

"This might be adopted by many of the stores in and around Boston. It is a simple thing, and it is a good one. Nobody misses a dime or a quarter, and I believe it would be the best method of raising money."

Money. You will understand how important the need for more money is. I have two boys in France and I have been killed in action."

Among the affairs planned to honor the fallen soldiers, the AMERICAN'S fund has given September 27 to the girls of the Boston Army Supply Base, at the front, to honor the fallen soldiers.

Miss May M. Quinn of No. 25 Wyman street, Jamaica Plain, has been named as the chairman of the committee on arrangements for the day.

Expert Advice on How to Fill Out Questionnaire

This is the RIGHT article in the series given by the Boston AMERICAN in June to fill out a questionnaire. It is the only one in the series dealing with dependency, for many men the most important article of the series. If you have a legitimate claim for dependency from June to present or if fully answering the questions and filling in the affidavit at the end of them.

Equally important series relating to industrial and agricultural compensation is to follow. The information which will guide you in filling out your affidavit is in the series of questions. It is the main part of his response in American hands of questionnaires in the series.

If you do not know June to fill out the questions in the series from one to ten you can get help from obtaining back numbers of this newspaper.

NAVY MEN GET FIRST PRIZE

Coch Doble Starts Work on Annapolis Gridiron—Good Recruit from St. Paul's

Annapolis, Md., Sept. 16.—Football will begin to hit a rapid pace around the Naval Academy with the arrival of most of the members of last year's squad today and tomorrow, only a few having been left by graduation.

One veteran on deck is Danford, guard of the 1934 team, who returned from the academy, but entered the new fourth class. The regular players of last year left by graduation are Captain Tom Hamilton, center, center, and Martin, fullback. The big squad from the new class has been at work under Coach Doble for the past month. Most of the candidates are not yet up to the standard of the usual first team, but a large proportion is showing promise, and the spirit is excellent.

MECHAN SLAPS WAY TO A DECISION OVER DEMPSEY

San Francisco, Sept. 16.—While (Slipper) Mechan, now in the navy, outpointed Jack Dempsey, aspirant to the world's heavyweight championship, in their four-round bout at the patriotic benefit show in the Western High School of Minneapolis.

The decision was given by Eddie Graessner, and the 18-year-old Mechan contributed 17,000 for the athletic fund of the school and soldiers and sailors.

Mechan had three of four rounds to his credit, and at the end of the fourth, had the conqueror of Dempsey hanging on and happy to let matters stand as they were.

Mechan wanted to win and moved most with Dempsey from the top of the game in the first round until the fifth, when he fought hard, landing hard and often.

TUOHY GETTING READY FOR 1918-19 MAT SEASON

George Tuohy is busy getting ready to give Boston its fifteenth consecutive season of wrestling.

While a lot of the city's old favorites are in the service, he has a lot of big grade mat men lined up, and to contend with weekly will prove equally as interesting as formerly.

"Yes, a lot of old stars are in the city," states Tuohy. "Strangler Lane is at Camp Grant, Joe Wheeler is in the navy and Earl Cadden is a lieutenant and over in France. However, I've signed some mighty good men, including quite a few who have never operated in Boston."

EVANS AND JONES LOSE FOUR-BALL TO PRO PAIR

New York, Sept. 16.—Tom McNamee and Jack Twining, professional golfers, defeated Charles F. (Chuck) Evans Jr. of Chicago, and Bobby Jones of Atlanta, in a four-stroke four-ball match at the St. Paul's golf club, today.

McNamee and Twining were the victors in the match, which was the first of a series of matches between the two teams.

Winthrop High Girls Organize Fast Hockey Team

Winthrop High School is going to have its own, strong girls' fast hockey team this coming winter season.

Practically fifty candidates are expected to try out for the team, and the school is expected to have a strong team by the time the season begins.

KRAMER AND GRENDL TEAM RACE WINNERS

Newark, N. J., Sept. 16.—Frank Kramer and Alf Grendl took the first mile team match race from Arthur Spencer and Francis Verzi and Bob Jones and Reggie McVerry at the Yvelonville track.

Kramer and Grendl were the winners, with a time of 1:10.4.

250,000 American soldiers go over seas every month

In 15 minutes the Mecca factory turns out enough cigarettes to give every one a smoke.

Why must so many Mecca cigarettes be made? The demand of over a million smokers must be satisfied every day. These smokers find in Mecca all they look for in a cigarette.

7 American tobaccos are chosen for their body and "pep"; 5 Turkish are selected for their fragrance and smoothness. Moist heat draws these 12 tobaccos into 1.

This is the famous Still-Blend process.

Buy a package of Mecca cigarettes today and get the flavor of 12 tobaccos drawn into one.

Good Athlete Makes Good Soldier, Says Ted Meredith

The lad who has learned his lesson of taking a sound drubbing in athletics without showing the "yellow streak," is the soldier the Allies want over here.

This statement was contained in a letter received recently from Ted Meredith of the University of Pennsylvania, world's record holder of the half-mile, who, with Tommy Lennon, another former noted college sprinter, is now living in France with the American aviation forces.

"The tried veteran of the athletic field," Meredith added, "makes the superior soldier. Sportsmen in America should do all in their power to grow to be in the great strife over here."

Dismissing athletes at the present time would be an unkindness to the men, both behind and on the front line.

"Sportsmen must be constantly backing up the boys in the first line," Meredith said, "for which we are all hoping is to be achieved, and nothing more than a man as game and aggressive as a sportsman can be in the first line."

He desires during his time off duty.

Lesson of General Foch's Success

In Military and Civil Activities All Power and All Responsibility Concentrated in One Man Make for Efficiency
Copyright, 1918, New Company.

The present victorious state of the allies in France carries with it a lesson to men in all branches of human activity—the civil as well as the military.

It is a testimony to, an object lesson in, the SUPERIOR EFFICIENCY OF ONE-MAN POWER.

The allied armies in France were just as strong, their cause was as worthy, their devotion and courage just as high prior to 1917 as was that year of encouragement.

We do not ignore the fact that prior to 1917 there had been no American army in Europe and that its coming greatly heartened and revived the war-worn men who had been fighting continuously for more than three years.

But as yet, despite their gallant and most efficient work at Chateau-Thierry and the Bois de Belleau, the Americans have not had the time nor been in actions in sufficient numbers to exert a controlling influence upon the military situation in France.

That controlling influence, that power which suddenly changed the situation from one of full of gloom and alarm for the allied cause to one of the brightest promise of impending allied victory was the appointment of General Foch as Generalissimo, with complete authority of command over the French, British, American, Belgian and Italian forces engaged on the western front.

General Foch had possessed no such power, and in the interim between the retirement of Joffre and the installation of Foch the authority of no general had remotely approached it.

Generals were supreme in their own sectors, but without authority elsewhere. Foch alone has commanded all the men fighting, not only on the line from the North Sea to Switzerland, but even over the Italians in the Dolomite Alps and in the sedgy marshes of the Piave.

The whole world has seen how this complete authority has been employed, and has marvelled at its success.

The foe could scarcely rally from a staggering blow delivered in one sector and gather his forces for defence when the long arm of Foch reached out and smote him savagely at some other point.

For the enemy there has been no rest. One after another, with bewildering rapidity, always in overwhelming force, at points widely separated from each other, but all clearly co-ordinated in a single coherent plan, the assaults now of the British, then of the French, then of the Americans, have been delivered.

In a quiet room of an old French chateau, surrounded by maps of the field and buzzing telephones, the master mind sat directing the warfare, the execution of which he could but infrequently witness.

There was the ganglion from which radiated all the nerves of the far-extended battle-field—there the one dominating spirit and mind which commanded success.

Until the time of this concentration of power in the hands of Foch the allied campaigns had been inconclusive.

Successes hardly won against heavy odds were frittered away by failure to follow them up with alacrity and determination. Reverses became disasters because of failure to marshal all available forces in defence.

All this is changed. With one mind in command—and that the mind of the master strategist Foch—every ounce of striking power of the allies is exerted when and where it will do the most good.

Of course one-man power must be exercised by the right man. But its possession not infrequently breeds ability and vigor in men not suspected of possessing either in large measure.

In civil life, in industrial or commercial circles, we have long been familiar with the fact that divided responsibility always creates weakness and cripples enterprise.

We are witnessing now the development and reform of our railroad systems under the individual authority of Mr. McAdoo which has already produced notable results, and which gives certain promise of far greater ones.

Can anyone imagine the United States Steel Corporation without the directing hand of Judge Gary, or the upbuilding of Bethlehem Steel without the restless industry of "Charley" Schwab, or the Ford Motor Works without Henry Ford, or Standard Oil in its formative period without John D. Rockefeller?

Or take an industry very much in the public eye—that of newspapers.

There was never a great newspaper built up save by the directing power and intellect of one man.

The victories of General Foch, then—may they continue long and multiply—teach the world a lesson applicable to every form of human activity.

If a great task is to be performed fit the right man to do it, and give him complete, individual and unequalled authority. Only so comes success.

DRILL FOR YOURSELF

Next time you watch soldiers go through the manual of arms listen to the commands and see if you are not impressed with their value as applied practically to everyday life.

"Attention!" You need not only to stand and walk in proper attitude, but attention to every bit of useful information you can gain.

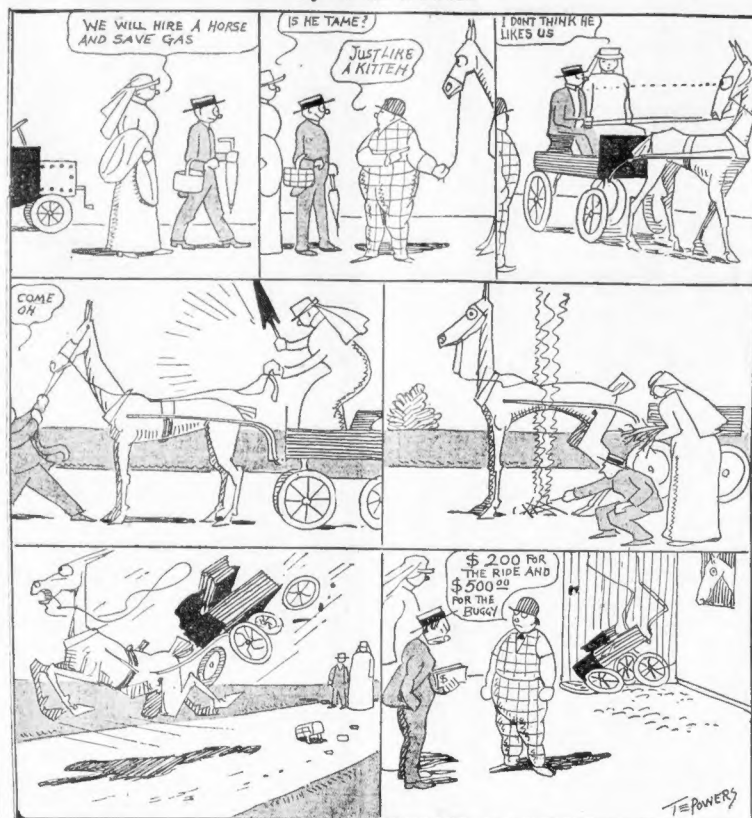

"Balance!" How do you perform your balance? In a careless, perfunctory manner, with no animation or feeling for the friends you meet?

"Mark time!" Do you school yourself to preparation before you start any undertaking that you may be more positive in its performance? Or, "Forward, march!" Do you plan and react action into your stride, or do you slouch along, thus plainly indicating yourself as weak and indecisive?

"Quick march!" Are you working up to greater speed, so that when there is the demand for it you may not be outstripped by another? Apply the soldier's drill commands to yourself, in your everyday life, and you will find them a great help to success.

Photographing the Stars

By EDGAR LUCIEN LARKIN
Director of the Lowell Observatory

CELESTIAL photography is a separate science of itself. All previous conceptions of the magnitude, complexity and intricacies of the universe of stars, of all astronomers before its introduction are far and away short of the reality.

Early astronomers were not imaginative enough. Their most exalted concepts of the stellar structure were far less than facts now demonstrated. Photographs cut out, as it were, portions of the sphere of stars for later use and measurement.

A telescope is like photographs of the celestial vault and thus secure permanent records of its scenery must be mounted equatorially. First, the massive cast-iron base must rest on a hard, solid stone or concrete pier.

There are two axes supporting the long telescope tube. If it is a refractor, or long open work of steel-lattice work if a reflector. The polar axis must be parallel to the axis of the earth. This is accomplished by two adjustments, first placing the polar axis in the meridian, a line drawn from the north celestial pole through the observer's zenith and outward to the south pole. And then the axis must be elevated as many degrees, minutes and seconds as there are in the latitude of the observer.

If these two works, requiring consummate skill, are accomplished, then the words parallel to the axis of the earth are true. The equatorial axis, of heavy steel, is bolted to the elevated end of the polar axis. If it is thus fixed at an exact right angle, i. e., 90 degrees, then it is parallel to the equator of the entire cosmic sphere, which is the earth's equator extended infinitely.

The images are so close together in the galactic regions that only a microscope can separate and count them. A point so small that it cannot be seen by the unaided eye may be a sun many thousands and even a million times larger than our own star, the sun, and our sun is 3,310,000 times larger than the earth.

AWAY OUT in the West.

ON THE other coast.

NOT MANY years ago.

THERE WAS an actor.

PLAYING in stock.

AND IT was my business.

TO WRITE of the shows.

AND I used to see him.

IN HIS many parts.

AND I used to like him.

AND WE used to talk.

ABOUT the Great White Way.

OF the faraway East.

AND HE knew them well.

AND HE didn't complain.

BUT I used to feel.

THAT HE had a feeling.

THEY HADN'T been kind.

AND IVE sat out there.

IN HIS dressing room.

THROUGH HIS hair.

AND RIGHT where he sat.

WAS THE treasure end.

OF HIS rainbow hair.

THAT HAD come to him.

BECAUSE HE had given.

ALL HE possessed.

TO THE parts he had played.

FRANK BACON'S his name.

AND THE name of his play.

IS "LIGHTNIN'."

AND I followed it.

AND TOOK the trail.

THAT LED me on.

AND INTO the land.

THAT HAD held the dreams.

OF MY actor friend.

AND I searched for him.

AND THERE came a night.

WHEN MY searching ceased.

AND I sat down front.

AND THE lights went out.

AND THE curtain rose.

AND HE was there.

AND THE play was done.

AND THE curtain down.

AND BACK on the stage.

IN HIS dressing room.

HE WAS running his fingers.

AT ONE MAN'S head.

AND IT stopped for me.

What War Saving Accomplishes

By GEORGE S. JOHNS

THRIFT is the foundation of prosperity. All the wise men who have garnered the fruits of wisdom and experience agree on this point. Our own Ben Franklin, one of the wisest of men and the founder of the modern science of efficiency, linked thrift with industry as an essential factor of success in life. Here are several of his maxims which have been the guide posts on the pathway to success for hosts of men:

If you would be wealthy, think of saving as well as of getting. Many a little makes a mickle. The art of getting rich consists very much in thrift. All men are not equally qualified for getting money, but it is in the power of everyone alike to practice this virtue. Save and have. If you know how to spend less than you get you have the philosopher's stone. All a man saves is his own for nothing and his country is actually so much richer. It is far from our intention to urge Americans to get wealthy while the Nation is engaged in the most gigantic war of all times. No American should think of accumulating wealth when all the resources and energies of the people should be devoted to the winning of the war.

The prime motive of war savings is to supply the Government with all the money it needs for the efficient and successful prosecution of the war. If the war is lost, everything is lost. Liberty will be gone; no man's home or family will be safe. Every man's property, talents, energy, and destiny will be at the mercy of a ruthless and greedy conqueror.

Letter to the Editor
Editor BOSTON AMERICAN:
Although it may be a little premature, the thought struck me that, after the present war, there would be an association formed similar to the Grand Army of the Republic and the Spanish War Veterans, and I thought a good name would be established in the different countries and have one grand head, with subordinate officers.

THE SLOVEN MAN, HIS WIFE AND FAMILY

By Winifred Black

SURELY we women are lectured and exhorted enough! One sister rises to remark, and her language is plain and to the point:

"I have read many times about the duties of a wife in keeping herself neat, clean and attractive, so that her husband will consider her good to look at, but why doesn't some one write about the duty of a husband to keep himself neat and attractive to his wife?"

Her husband, she goes on, before her marriage, was always clean and freshly dressed every evening after his work, when he came to see her. She never saw him unshaved. There was an entire change. He only "dressed up," shaved and bathed on Sunday afternoons, and now, after five years of married life, he only shaves once in a great while, and goes around looking a fright, in old, greasy clothes, with long hair and a growth of whiskers.

He likes to see his wife and children neat, but the wife cannot, the wife, "finks or reasons or scolds him into thinking" that she likes to see him as he was before they were married.

All the worst of it is the poor wife finds her four-year-old son copying after his father's untidy ways. In spite of all she can do to teach her better ways.

And this is the case of a man forty-five years old with a young wife.

Men and brethren, can such things be?

Turn About Is Fair

I have seen dirty, bedraggled men in the street and lounging in the parks, but I thought they were tramps. I never could think that a man who owned his own pretty home and had a clever wife and growing children would allow himself to degenerate into an untidy, unsavory member of the human race. All that is written and said to correct slothful habits in wives and mothers is well written and well said, for no woman who yields to lazy habits can hope to hold her love and respect of her family and friends.

But the foodstuffs should be opened and the eloquence of orators and writers should be turned, for a time, on slovenly men. If even a few of them can be turned into decent respectability.

There is only one good excuse for slovenliness, and that is laziness and stupefying sickness. Sometimes an invalid is afflicted, and as well as body by certain ailments, and then every effort should be made to overlook and forgive the offense. At the same time, whoever is nearest to the invalid should use every effort to take care of his person and clothing which he is unable to attend to himself.

Example Is Powerful

Without saying, of course, but what of the man in health, and in full possession of all his faculties, who disgraces himself, his wife and his country by the habits and ways of a homeless, homeless tramp?

And what of the wife and children of such a man? What combination of social agencies can help them?

I am afraid the case is hopeless. All the wife can do is to bring up her children in habits entire and far from those of their father. No easy task, but it can be done. Have some of drunken men who leave the sight and taste of strong drink. And this is often the case with the teaching and stamping of a devoted mother, although sometimes it comes from the father's habits.

Yom Kippur, and Sabbath. Republican Peace Anguish. Who Yawns for Peace? The Biggest Pocketbook.

By Arthur Brisbane

This day is Yom Kippur, given up by the Jews of the world to introspection and humility. Waste of time, says the practical Yankee, but perhaps it isn't.

In his History of Rome, Ferrar describes Caesar scheming at home and envying the hero returning with many conquests, including that of the Jews.

The Roman soldier reported that the Jews fought with desperate energy and courage, defending their city. He almost despair of success until he noticed that one day is seven the fighting within the walls suddenly stopped. For twenty-four hours there was quiet, no effort to kill Romans.

It was the Jewish Sabbath. The Roman let his men rest six days, attacked savagely when the seventh day came, took the city and started the usual massacre, presumably.

You might naturally say that such Sabbath observance was all foolishness and enough to ruin the Jews.

But they are here today, and everywhere, faithful to the same religion and doing, on the whole, very well. Where is the religion of that Roman general?

Republican patriots—anti-Republicans, then patriots—assure you that Congress should be Republican this time to keep Woodrow Wilson from making the wrong kind of peace, too quick and pleasant peace for Prussia. Does that assure you?

That was before we were at war, when everybody wanted peace. The President is a man of the same kind of one thing at a time thoroughly.

Just now he and the soldiers in France seem to be thinking of "victory," and never mind peace for the present.

How would the Republican statesmen answer these questions?

Who is really in a hurry for the war's end—no matter how?

Is it not the man of huge income, unwillingly paying a tax of 50 to 75 per cent?

Are not the very big income receivers men that belong to the Republican party, or rather men to whom the Republican party belongs? Did not Woodrow Wilson put through the tax plan which will pay for the war indefinitely, if necessary, and without too great hardship on the little people whose case, do most of the fighting?

If he could be trusted to start the war at the right time, would he be trusted to stop it at the right time?

The big pocketbooks would like to dictate peace—"Wait! You're in a hurry." But they will not have the handling of the matter. It will be "Wilson, that's all."

A competent doctor says about the "Spanish influenza":

First, don't get frightened. Second, remember that we feed the influenza to ourselves, moistening our germs with sugar water. Turn the pages of book or newspaper. Make your children keep their hands away from their mouths. The Germans must lodge on the mucous membranes in your mouth, and we deliberately put them there, after collecting them on our hands in street cars or public places.

The Germans in their Wagnerian retreat have reached the Brundage line. Brundage was the young lady whom her father, Worm, put to sleep in a circle of fire for disobedience. Very appropriate that the Kaiser's troops should land at that young lady's line in the drive that showed American speed to have defeated the Prussian calculations by at least ten days. In her approach, sleep Brundage Hohenzollern will have a nap that will know no waking.

It will be a troubled Brundage sleep for a while. Already the Germans themselves are beginning to discuss the possibility of revolution. Interruption of the war by the statesman says vaguely that the revolution "will be everywhere," but shows he knows where it will start.

The last big German gun, built to destroy Paris, has been found and destroyed. Paris stands safe. It will for many a century. Only a few women and children killed tell the story of that marvellous product of Teutonic civilization.

Lord Bryce has sufficiently answered all the recent German peace talks. What Bryce says will win all the civilized peoples. First, civilization is not German. Germany, finally and permanently, is not a nation that are civilized and now stand together will organize the universal armed police force on peace and security keep the world's savages in their place—whether Bulgars, Turks, Prussians orussians Bolsheviks.

The nations of the world will keep a police force he knows, and the savages of the world, like the criminal in a big city, will be taught to fear the police—sanitized violence when necessary.
